World Day of Social Justice

Today is the World Day of Social Justice, which highlights the ever-increasing need to promote and maintain justice in society.

Social justice takes into account pressing issues including gender inequality, racism, poverty, unemployment, social protection, and human rights, and calls for each of these problems plaguing society to be given attention to.

All human beings are equal, and they need to be treated as such no matter what their race, religion, gender, ethnicity, colour, age, or social background.

Message of the Week

When you set limits on yourself, they start to define every part of your life, and restrict your potential. Remember, limits are just plateaus—temporary stops on your journey. Push beyond them, and you'll discover endless possibilities waiting for you.
